Depression in Children and Adolescents

Definition

Children with symptoms of depression show behaviors that cause problems in getting along with others and difficulties in school. The symptoms may include being irritable or grouchy, losing interest in daily activities, losing interest in friends, complaints about feeling ill (especially stomach and head aches), and doing poorly in school.

Why do we care?

When compared to their developmental peers children who display symptoms of depression:

-  Have lower levels of academic performance.
-  Are more likely to attempt suicide.
-  Are more likely to have unprotected sex.
-  Are more likely to abuse substances.

What can we do about it?

-  Actively observe your child's behavior around the house. Consider how and where your children spend their time – in their room alone, outside with peers, in front of the television.
-  Think about the factors at home that may contribute to the child's symptoms of depression. Write these down on a piece of paper and bring them with you when meeting with school staff.
-  Learn how to identify "cries for help" from children and adolescents with depression. Know when your child needs immediate attention from you or a specialist.
-  Ask teachers and school clinicians about available resources in the community. Attempt to enroll your child in a recreational league or youth organization that utilizes their strengths and talents.
-  Seek a specialist's opinion of psychiatric treatments for depression. Visit the library to read more about the different types of medicine prescribed for depression.
